Rio Grande Valley residents are now getting free tax help in Brownsville and San Benito.

A non-profit organization named One Economy is helping people get their taxes done for free.

The group has set up an office at the former Amigoland Mall in Brownsville through Friday.

They're also using this service to help the public learn how to use computers and the Internet.

The group is also looking for grants to get computers and Internet service to low-income families.

They say that education is the key for building a better economy.

Meanwhile, low-income families in San Benito are also receiving free tax help through April 15 at the city's Start Center.
